

August 1st 2023

Since 1891 the national day has been celebrated in Switzerland on August 1st. This date was determined by one of the first treaties signed between the cantons of Uri, Schwyz and Unterwald.

Men from these three cantons concluded «at the beginning of August 1291» a perpetual alliance, in which they solemnly promised each other mutual assistance.

Bonfires, lit above all on the mountains and hills, recall the expulsion of foreign bailiffs in the 14th century; the news would indeed have been announced by this means. Children walk through the dark streets with paper lanterns lit by a candle. Flags with the arms of the Confederation, the canton and the commune float on public and private buildings.
